

Advanced Air Mobility (AAM) launched as part of the inaugural Aviation Week Network Aerospace Incubator series. The Aerospace Incubator is intended to take relevant niche topics forward by bringing together stakeholders and thought-leaders to advance the industry.

Today, the aerospace industry stands on the horizon of a new era of aviation — AAM and this vision is getting closer to becoming a day-to-day reality. Much work has been done to prove the business case of this transformative airborne technology and now the focus moves to how enabling technologies, regulatory changes, financing and private investment will make these ideas work in practice.

AAM delved into the whole ecosystem from establishing the foundational groundwork, proof of concept and financing options through to airframe design, enabling technologies and infrastructure changes, connecting the key players across this revolutionary community.

Key Topics Addressed:

- Industry Key Trends: Building a Forecast
- Infrastructure Capabilities: Creating an Urban Airspace
- The AAM Workforce
- How Private Investment Has Changed the AAM Landscape
- Modeling, Simulation and Training for Emerging Aviation Technologies and Concepts
- Propulsion for the Future
- Accelerating the Regulatory Environment

"I found the conference to be very engaging. I liked the materials presented and thought it was a great start for AAM conferences. I enjoyed the meet and greet sessions immensely, that format was productive for me to meet the other attendees and presenters. Thank you for a great show!"
